

Course Title: Legal Education and Research Methodology
Course Code: LLM-C-201

Course Objective: Postgraduate students of law should get an insight into the objectives of legal education. They should be exposed to programmes like seminars, publication of law journals and holding of legal aid clinics. Law is taught in different ways in different countries. The LL.M course is also intended to produce lawyers with better competence and expertise. The students must familiarise themselves with the different systems of legal education. Both at the LL.B level and LL.M level, the lecture method has many demerits. The existing lacunae can be eliminated by following other learning methods such as case methods, problem method, discussion method, seminar method and a combination of all these methods.

Course Outcome: After completing this course, students are expected to develop a broad-based understating of the various legal methods in legal research to use them for any research-based assignment. The growth of legal science in India depends on the nature and career of legal research. The syllabus is designed to develop also skills in research and writing in a systematic manner. This course is also expected to hone the writing skills of the students.
